

economic interests. Many observers are pessimistic, but I prefer to think of the glass as half full, and ready to be filled to the brim.

The Prime Minister's sentiments raise many issues, including: the nation's commitment to an environment conducive to free speech and citizen participation; a commitment to building an informed and engaged citizenry as a key to inclusive, long term economic development; a call for the quick and unconditional release of journalists and political prisoners as a measure of good faith; and commitment to a diverse and multi-party election in 2015, free from federal government interference.

Hopeful as I am, I urge my Senate and House colleagues to re-commit to assistance we have offered the people of Ethiopia and their government in the past.

Let us help build a national consensus on the value of the following goals in Ethiopia: robust public institutions that represent the diversity of perspectives in Ethiopia; free and fair political processes drawing legitimacy from broad citizen participation; an independent judicial system as outlined in Ethiopia's constitution; a press with institutional independence and legal protection to enable it to accommodate a broad range of perspectives and ensure the free flow of information, ideas and opinions that are necessary in a democratic society, as outlined in Ethiopia's constitution; an environment where each citizen can take advantage of Ethiopia's economic success; and the security that comes with the assurance that universal rights are respected and protected.

Our international partnerships are stronger and more enduring when we share values of opportunity and freedom with our partners. A more democratic Ethiopia would represent a more stable and reliable partner for the United States and serve the long-term interests of peace and security in the Horn of Africa. A more democratic Ethiopia would ease the free flow of information, which would ease trade and ensure more informed investments. A more democratic Ethiopia would ensure that government policies are the result of broad national consultation with all segments of society.

Such are hallmarks of inclusive and sustainable economic growth, and they provide a return of accountability and transparency to both American taxpayers and Ethiopian citizens. Let's do what we can to help our fast and true friend, Ethiopia, extend opportunity and freedom to the majority of its citizenry.

Mr. REED. Madam President, today I congratulate the Salve Regina University men's rugby team for winning the 2012 National Small College Rugby Organization's Division III National Championship on April 29, 2012, in Glendale, CO.

The Salve Regina Seahawks, ranked number one by the National Small College Rugby Organization, were undefeated this season with a record of 11-0. The Seahawks' 21-15 victory over the California Maritime Academy Keelhaulers in the championship match was the first national championship victory for Salve Regina University in any sport.

REMEMBERING EDWARD MALLOY

• Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Madam President, today I wish to mourn the passing of Edward J. Malloy, who dedicated his life as a champion for hard working men and women in New York State and throughout the country.

Mr. Malloy was a tireless advocate for workers' rights, serving as president of the Building and Construction Trades Council of greater New York from 1992 to 2008 and as president of the New York State Building and Construction Trades Council from 1992 until his retirement earlier this year. Prior to his service in these capacities, Mr. Malloy served as president of the Enterprise Association of Steamfitters Local Union 638, where he began as an apprentice, rose to journeyman and was a longtime member. He was also a veteran of the U.S. Army.

Mr. Malloy was a driving force for private economic development and public infrastructure improvements throughout New York State. He was instrumental in promoting measures to contain construction costs and maximize employment opportunities for workers. His signature achievement in this regard was the advancement of project labor agreements for major public works projects, which are now widely used to deliver construction in a cost-efficient and timely manner.

Mr. Malloy was also a strong supporter of promoting opportunity and diversity in the construction industry's workforce, helping launch programs to provide access to careers in the building and construction trades for youth, veterans of the U.S. Armed Services, minorities and women. In particular, an organization that Mr. Malloy helped found has to date placed more than 1,300 youth, public housing residents and other city residents into unionized apprenticeships, 89 percent of whom are African American, Hispanic, Asian and other minorities. The results of these efforts are evident today, with the majority of union apprentices and workers in New York City's construction industry being African American, Hispanic, Asian and other minorities.

Edward J. Malloy was respected by all who knew him as not only a tireless advocate for working men and women, but an advocate for our great city and State. His hard work and wit allowed him to pass easily from union halls to business board rooms and the chambers of government.

This dedication and personality served members of organized labor well for decades as he worked to promote job creation, economic development and fairness. His contributions are immeasurable and we owe him an enormous debt of gratitude for them. We extend our heartfelt condolences to his family on behalf of an entire industry. Mr. President, today, I ask all members of this esteemed body to join me in honoring Edward J. Malloy's lifetime of commitment to improving the lives of working men and women from around the country.●
